FOREWORD

“There’s almost as much unreleased material, in some cases more unreleased material, from every era of about a 26-year period than there is released stuff.”

Neil Young interview in Pulse, 1991.

This document attempts to provide as complete a catalogue as possible of songs written or performed by Neil Young which do not appear on his officially released physical media and which therefore cannot be purchased through conventional channels. This catalogue therefore contains material which has already have been released on unofficial “bootleg” media or other non-commercial recordings, or which is available only via streaming services, including the official Neil Young Archive, which cannot be permanently purchased and downloaded.

The decisive factor for inclusion is whether the song is available on “standard” physical media currently in general public use, such as vinyl LPs or CDs and DVDs. This catalogue may therefore contain titles which have exclusively been released on “non-standard” audio media such as Blu-Ray, VHS etc. or on the official Neil Young Archive website. My apologies if this differentiation seems illogical, but for me the decisive factor is whether one can personally own an official medium and have unrestricted access to it. It is a definition perhaps aimed more at “collectors” than consumers.

For the sake of completeness and clarity, the catalogue may include the alternative names of songs which have in fact been released officially under another name. They are in this case marked in square brackets and the official title is referred to.

As far as I know, this “Unofficial Archive” is the most comprehensive published listing of Neil Young’s unreleased material available anywhere, though the future publication of further official archive material can at any time change its accuracy. Many of the entries here will presumably at some point become part of his officially released material. I will try to update what will hopefully become an ever shorter document as time goes on.

How big is Neil Young’s repertoire? If you add the total number of songs listed on Sugar Mountain (sugarmtn.org) to my list of unreleased titles and subtract the duplicates, you would be looking at 1,000-1,200 separate titles or performed songs which you would want to list as belonging to his life's work.

This "Unofficial Archive" lists the following, of which only about 100-150 are also listed on Sugar Mountain:

- Some 180 titles not already released on official media (and which do not appear in the official Neil Young Archive) which are either definitely written by Neil Young or which are songs written by others but performed by him in a “leading” or “major supporting” role, not as a minor supporting guest in someone else’s performance. There is however a subjective grey zone here and the differentiation is often arguable.
- Around 30 titles which are on the evidence very likely to be songs he wrote. If they are not, then they are at least covers which he definitely performed. Again none of these are listed (yet) in the official NYA.

- More than 250 covers of other artists' songs which he performed in his early years in Canada

In addition to these are a number of Buffalo Springfield/CSNY/Ducks titles which have not been released on official media, plus all the songs where he guested in a minor role or joined in an "all-star" band, for example at charity events etc.

I am making this information available in the public domain for Neil's fans and other interested researchers. I have always intended it to be a "community project", a kind of WikiNeil, and I invite everyone to join in and contribute with feedback, input, corrections, suggestions and of course new content.

If for any reason you make use of it in publications of any kind, please do give me a credit – where credit is due!, just as I have tried to give credit to those sources I have drawn upon. And please let me know if you know of any other sources which I can include or cooperate with in future.

Neil Young obviously has the right as an artist not to release or wish to release material he does not consider it appropriate or ready to release. I apologise to him if my love and admiration of his work helps to make known or propagate material which he does not want to release or make known in this way.

He is however a true artist, one whose work will live on for posterity, and it is in my opinion fair and reasonable to explore and catalogue what makes an artist tick. I hope he agrees. I am certainly not trying to make any money out of this project, just help others to understand the artist better.

I hope you find this useful.

A NOTE ON SOURCES

Under Sources at the end of Section III I have tried to list all the sources which I have trawled in the creation of this work. However as I had never intended at the start of this project for it to be a “serious” publication, I did not necessarily note all the sources in the early stages of its preparation. I apologise to anyone who has been missed out in this way and if notified I will correct the error immediately.

I make no attempt to establish any rights to the individual information items in this listing. Too many others have provided the building stones for me to lay any justified claim to this complete version. However there is a great deal of my own work involved, and the only work I therefore lay a “copyright” claim to is the gathering and cataloguing of this information in this comprehensive and structured form and the listing and cross referencing of the various supporting references.

If this version includes YouTube references and/or links, some YouTube links may not be available in some countries for local copyright reasons. In many cases proper copyright permissions may not have been obtained by those posting the material on YouTube in the first place. For this reason many YouTube postings disappear after their initial publication. I cannot guarantee therefore that the YouTube listings referred to are still available.

I apologise to anyone, especially to Neil Young and his publishers if they feel their copyright is offended by my publishing any YouTube links. I will remove them if they so wish. In any event in some versions of this catalogue, the YouTube links have already been removed and in others the links are not hyperlinked.

Copyright of all copyright material belongs of course to the original copyright owners. It is not my intention to benefit in any way from the use, reproduction of, or reference to, any copyright material in any form. In the interests of making Neil’s work better known to his fans, I ask for the understanding of the copyright owners that no commercial interests are involved on my part and that I am not intending to impact the copyright owners’ commercial interests. Quite the opposite – I hope this document will increase interest in their work. I will of course remove any copyright material at the earliest opportunity if requested to do so.

NOTE

For this particular version of the “Unofficial Archive”, I have decided for copyright reasons to remove the hundreds of links to existing YouTube postings of many of the titles. If they have not been removed in the meantime by the copyright owners, you should with a bit of intelligent research and the use of different search terms be able to find them yourselves. Good hunting!

* Entries with an asterisk (*) represent entries personally recommended by myself. This is however a matter of personal taste on my part, but perhaps you share my taste!

Mentions of specific performances, especially live performances, do not imply that the song was only performed on that occasion or even first performed on that occasion unless this is stated. My main interest is simply to provide at least one example of the performance of a particular song. For further information please consult <http://www.sugarmtn.org>

I. NEIL YOUNG SONGS NOT RELEASED ON OFFICIAL MEDIA

Officially unreleased Neil Young Songs written by Neil Young, and recordings or performances of other artists' songs by Neil Young which have not been officially released. See also Foreword for more information.

PART ONE – THE CANADIAN YEARS

In the period up to the end of March 1966 when Neil Young left Canada for Los Angeles, all the early bands of which he was a member played a large number of covers of popular songs of the time. Many of earliest titles were instrumentals or were played as instrumentals. Particularly in the case of The Squires, however, the proportion of Neil Young's own compositions increased noticeably. Ken Smyth said: "Right from the beginning... Neil had his own stuff. Half of our stuff, easy, was his own. It just kept comin', one after another... it seemed to be endless." (SMY p.257). And John Einarson writes, "As early as 1962, Neil had begun writing his own songs. At first he composed guitar instrumentals... Ken Smyth (said)... 'He had piles of songs. Songs that we never played.'" (DBD p.67)

A large number of these cover versions of other artists' material can be identified because they are well known. However certainly nowhere near a "half" of the total repertoire from the Canadian Years can be identified as Neil Young's original compositions. Was Ken Smyth greatly exaggerating or is there indeed a very large collection of original compositions which no one yet knows about? An intriguing question. Sharry Wilson, author of SMY, says Neil can often be seen carrying a big black book around, apparently with listings of songs. Hopefully they are all still in there.

Another challenge is that Neil Young may have used song titles for his own original compositions which had the same title as existing compositions by other artists. Without further evidence, for example of a known recording or performance, it is often not clear if a song is original or a cover. In cases where no obvious previous composition appears to exist, I have noted that a title is a possible or probable Neil Young composition.

In Part One – The Canadian Years I have only listed those songs which are not, or at least do not appear to be, covers of songs released by other artists. Some may indeed be covers but I have so far not been able to trace an original song from or before that period. Help and suggestions are very welcome from others more familiar with the music of the late 1950s and early 1960s than I am. Except where stated none of these songs are at the time of writing currently listed on NYA.

For a listing of the many songs written by other artists and covered by Neil Young and his bands during this period, see Part Three – Early Covers. The breadth and depth of the repertoire of Neil's early bands is quite amazing. There are more than 250 titles in Part Three alone.

First, for orientation, a short summary of the various bands and Neil Young played in before his legendary journey to Los Angeles in March 1966.

The Jades (Late 1960-Jan 1961)

Neil Young's very first band which he joined around the time he turned 15, "playing the hits of the Fireballs and the Ventures" (SKY p.82, SMY pp.180, 241, DBD p.47). See Part Three – Early Covers. The Jades only had one live appearance and made no recordings (SMY p.181, DBD p.47).

The Esquires (Feb 1961-Jan 1962)

The Esquires are said to have played Shadows and Ventures instrumentals (SKY p.82), and "songs from Fireball's first album" (SMY pp.184-189). See Part Three – Early Covers.

The Stardusters / The Teen Tones / The Twilighters (Jan 1962-Nov 1962)

Neil Young bands known under different names including the above, their repertoire was based on those of his previous bands and new covers of contemporary hits etc. (NYA, SKY p.85, SMY pp.213-214, 221, 241, 272). See Part Three – Early Covers. He also played in a band called Carmine La Rosa & The Thunderstorms during this period but not much is specifically known about their repertoire.

The Classics (Nov 1962-Dec 1962)

The repertoire of The Classics is again largely based on his previous bands and further covers of contemporary hits, "instrumental numbers by Johnny & The Hurricanes, The Ventures and Duane Eddy" (DBD p.57. NYA, SKY p.85, SMY pp.224, 237, 240-241, 272, 455). See Part Three – Early Covers.

The Squires / The High Flying Birds / 4 To Go / Forte Four (Dec 1962-Oct 1965)

As with previous bands, the repertoire of The Squires and their later offshoots included many covers of older songs, although the number of Neil Young compositions increased dramatically at this time. "Old pop tunes and waltzes to the inevitable Shadows covers, as well as Neil's originals" (SKY pp.85, 87). Many titles are listed in SMY, particularly in the appendices which reproduce original song lists from The Squires era. See Part Three – Early Covers. Further information: SKY pp.122, 132. SMY pp.224, 237, 240-241, 252-253, 272, 291, 292, 455 App.B, App.E, DBD p.62, 65, 108, 120, 123.

Solo (Toronto / New York – Nov 1965-Dec 1965)

"A mixture of personal favourites from other repertoires including those of Bob Dylan, Phil Ochs and Hamilton Camp, and his own material, much of it written recently while scuffling in Toronto" (DBD p.160). In New York he recorded a demo for Elektra from which only I Ain't Got The Blues (q.v.) has not yet been released.

The Mynah Birds (Jan 1966-March 1966)

The Mynah Birds performed covers, including songs from The Rolling Stones, as well as original titles. Neil Young was co-writer of four songs listed below. "There are tapes of me and The Mynah Birds but I've not been able to get hold of them," Neil Young said in an interview in Mojo, 1995.

Listed here in Part One are songs which are either definitely original compositions by Neil Young or likely to be so because it has not been possible to trace an original song with the same or a similar title from another artist from or before that period. Except where stated these titles are not (yet) listed on NYA. Squires' and Neil's earlier bands' covers of songs by other artists are generally listed in Part Three – Early Covers below.

Theme from Dead Man*

1995, this version is not on the Dead Man album and is available only on the US promo CD-single as well as on a promo single cassette Hold On Tight (with other bands from Vapor Records and other small labels), and on a compilation in an issue of Q Magazine. It is the music played under the opening and closing credits in the movie and it is the only Dead Man-related track for which a video was made. This is the music often referred to as “that acoustic track...”, although it is not solely acoustic:

PART THREE – EARLY COVERS AND INFLUENCES

For the same reason that Neil Young and his various early bands covered so many popular songs of the time, different versions of many of the songs listed below were also released by different artists in that same era. It has therefore not been possible in all cases (yet!) to identify the original version or to know for sure which version most likely influenced Neil Young and his bands.

Names in brackets in this section, unlike the other sections in this work, are not the original composer but rather the most likely artist or artists being covered.

“Various” means there are too many possible previous versions to list sensibly. “Orig.” gives details of the original artist who first released the song, often used together with “various”. Orig is also used in order to identify the version of the song being covered from other songs with a similar title.

Covers and influences from the earliest years (until 1960)

Covers

Baby Jean (The Country Gentlemen, orig. Ronnie Hawkins & The Hawks) SMY p.145

Be-Bop-A-Lula (Gene Vincent) instrumental, SPD Ch.7

II. NEIL YOUNG PERFORMING ON THE RELEASED MEDIA AND AT CONCERT APPEARANCES OF OTHER ARTISTS

It is often very difficult, if not impossible, to objectively define Neil Young's role in many appearances where he played with other leading artists and performers. Songs and performances in which he clearly played a leading role as singer or instrumentalist are generally listed in other sections of this catalogue. Such distinctions are especially difficult to make at events like the Bridge School Benefits and other "charity"-type concerts involving many leading acts who often perform and jam together.

The following list attempts therefore to catalogue performances which would probably have been billed under another artist's name and where Neil Young therefore performed more as a guest rather than as a co-billing.

Special thanks in this section to Pete Long Ghosts On The Road, 2nd Edition 2007 and SugarMtn.Org. For further information especially on performances with Neil Young's "standalone" bands, Buffalo Springfield, CSNY, The Ducks, Pearl Jam, Booker T. & The MGs, see Part Two – The American Years as well as GOR and SMT.

III. UNRELEASED NEIL YOUNG ALBUM PROJECTS

These albums have not officially been released by Neil Young. Much of the information here is unofficial and derives in many cases from a certain amount of speculation. Posted notes on the Archives website have recently confirmed the existence of several projects which were previously only rumoured to exist.

Not generally listed here are possible albums based on recordings of single concerts, unless they are under discussion already as album projects. Bootlegs are also not listed, though some bootlegs are attempts to recreate the supposed unreleased albums.

Special thanks to Richard Bonino; the contributors to the stevehoffman.tv forum thread; human-highway.org; nyarchives.altavista.com; beatblog2.blogspot.de;

<http://neilyoungnews.thrasherswheat.org/2017/08/so-what-might-we-find-on-neil-youngs.html?m=1>; and all the published Neil Young literature.

PART ONE – DOCUMENTED ALBUM PROJECTS

Album projects which are either listed in NYA or supported by documentation and not just speculation or wish lists of fans.

Meadow Dusk 1987

Neil Young talks about a concept album for David Geffen in 1987, SKY p.614:

“It was just a concept thing. It was gonna be a strong record, I’m tellin’ ya, but it was gonna be really really out. Synthesizer and acoustic New Age instrumentals. The beat would come and go, sounds would come and go. Very much like what I ended up doing on Arc, only soft. The titles were all really descriptive, and they would just either be sung over and over again or whispered at certain points. And that was it. Sound concepts, industrial noise. And the cover would be me standing in a misty meadow wearing these baggy corduroy Dockers with a Ford Aerostar—sort of like a subtler On the Beach kinda thing. And it was gonna be called “Meadow Dusk.” Some guy with his Aerostar in the meadow, standing there. Probably woulda been put down by a lotta people. They woulda said what a piece of * it was, how unmeaningful it was. Coulda been innaresting.”

See also lyric from Dreamin Man: “In the meadow dusk I park my Aerostar...”

Mediterranean 1974

= The Water Album

Mentioned by Joel Bernstein in BAM33 p.29

REVIEWS OF THE FIRST EDITION

Good stuff Robert and an interesting document for debate and discussion. It's about time someone tried to document all this material. I think you've just cost me 103 pages of paper and an ink cartridge. It'll be an interesting trawl...

Scott Sandie

Finally got a chance to have a look at your amazing work.

Thor Henning Bugsett

It's such a comprehensive (and great) document, it has taken a while before I can do justice to it by reading line by line.

Robert Sampimon

That's an awesome document

Sharry Wilson

Good work.

Tom, Sugarmtn.org

Shit, dude! This is impressive! I can't wait to read it.

David Green

Thanks for offering Thrasher's Wheat the opportunity to host this valuable work.

Thrasherswheat.org

wow, just wow!

Paul Dionne

It's an amazing compilation...a labour of Love!

Dave Murphy

Definitive list! Excellent!

andrea1bianco, Thrasherswheat.org

Thanks to Robert's awesome project!! I feel like your project has really taken Rustdom to a new level. Does Neil know about it?? It's such great timing with NYA.

Nayantara Kabir

Your work is absolutely incredible.

John Kwit, North American Reporter, 4WaySite.com

Unbelievable research and compilation! Thank you.

Anonymous, Thrasherswheat.org

Brilliant research.

lee goo, Thrasherswheat.org

This is terrific. Thanks to the author for creating it, and to Thrasher for hosting it!

Wardo, Thrasherswheat.org

Avid Neil Young collector Robert Broadfoot has compiled a huge and carefully annotated list of unreleased song.
